

Director-at-Large – Amy McCallion

Amy McCallion is currently the Corporate Secretary to the BC Hydro Board of Directors. She brings experience in governance, negotiation, policy development, law, and business. Her interest in health is longstanding and was piqued during a leadership role with Health Canada (now First Nations Health Authority) where she managed an innovative maternal health program which was piloted in multiple Indigenous communities across the province and nationally. After obtaining her law degree, Amy practiced insurance law in Vancouver prior to joining BC Hydro's Indigenous Relations group where she led complex negotiations with Indigenous communities on major capital projects. She has been fortunate to work in many regions of the province, urban and rural, throughout her career.

Amy graduated from the University of Victoria with a BA in Political Science and the University of Calgary with a JD in Law. While at the University of Calgary, she received several awards including the Sheilah Martin Prize in Legal Theory and the Lawson Lundell Prize in Aboriginal Law. She is a member of the Law Society of British Columbia and the Governance Professionals of Canada. She also serves as a Director on the Atira Women's Resource Society Board of Directors.

Amy became engaged with the Society in 2017 as a member of the Breakfast to Remember Vancouver Organizing Committee. She was elected to the of Directors in 2018 and currently sits on the Society's Climb for Alzheimer's Organizing Committee and the Board's Governance Committee.
