

Opportunity to participate in research

Researchers at Dalhousie University are studying innovative programs that are in place across the country to help individuals and families in the community who are dealing with life-limiting chronic illness access the services and supports they need. As part of this study, the research team is interested in learning more about how the Alzheimer's Society of Nova Scotia is supporting individuals with dementia who are living in the community, and their families.

The research team would like to speak with individuals who have accessed services and supports through the Alzheimer's Society of Nova Scotia to learn about their experiences. We are currently seeking two individuals to participate in our study. We are interested in speaking with:

- Individuals who are over the age of 18 years
- Individuals with dementia who are living in the community, OR family members of individuals with dementia
- Individuals who have accessed programs or services and supports through the Alzheimer's Society of Nova Scotia

Participation will involve a one-time telephone interview with a member of the research team. If you are interested in participating in this study, or have questions, please contact the Research Coordinator:
