

A vibrant collage of various board games and items. At the top left is the Monopoly box with its iconic top hat man logo. To its right is a clock and a Twister box. Below Monopoly is a yellow Connect Four board. To the right of Connect Four is a Clue box featuring a blue plate with a sandwich and a cookie. Below Clue is a Scrabble board with a Coca-Cola bottle, glasses, and a cookie. To the left of the Scrabble board is a Risk box. Below Risk is a Battleship box. In the center is a map of the world with various game pieces and a purple Scrabble bag. A bowl of popcorn is on the left, and a Coca-Cola bottle is in the center. Various game pieces, cards, and a yellow pencil are scattered throughout the collage.

Fun and Games Detective

Search for the items in bold.

The grandkids of Jim and Judy Richards were known by them as “the delightful four.”
Whenever their daughter needed a break, she knew who to call for sure.
Because they never failed to say yes when she asked them to babysit,
She had their number on speed dial with “Help!” written next to it.

This time it was for a weekend—two whole days with the energetic crew.
They looked at each other and said, “Lord help us, what will we do?”
Judy brought out the Scrabble, Monopoly, Connect 4, and Battleship games.
Along with 10 dominos, a deck of cards, and a joker for their grandson James.

2 reading glasses, 8 dice, and 4 Monopoly money bills were on the table, too,
With a clock, 3 pencils, a sand timer, and the confidential envelope with the answer for Clue.
Judy hid the Twister spinner from the kids, to spare their grandparents’ bad backs.
She served a sandwich, a bowl of popcorn, 5 cookies, and 3 bottles of Coke for snacks.

“These are baby games!” proclaimed 12-year-old Max. “I want to play poker instead.”
Jim found poker chips—5 green, 9 red, 4 blue, and dealt 2 poker hands while dreaming of bed.
At long last their daughter arrived, and Jim and Judy with big smiles waved them out the door.
Then they pledged next time they’d hire a babysitter to help them babysit “the exhausting four!”