

Grandpa's Garage Detective

Search for the items in bold.

If you're looking for Grandpa, most likely you'll find him puttering away in his favorite spot to think, work, and—with a tennis racquet and 3 balls—play. Better known as "George's Garage," it's the place where he happily retreats, amongst his many tools, 3 maps, and "hidden-from-Grandma-sweets."

Away from Grandma's eagle eye, he works on projects in his space man-made, Spending hours with his drill, set of drill bits, and circular saw blade. There's spackle, 4 spark plugs, 6 screwdrivers, 2 wrenches, and a handsaw, with a treasured baseball souvenir and 2 old license plates hanging on the wall.

There's a paint can, paint roller, 2 tape measures, putty knife, and plaster, Plus 2 hammers and 5 nails from a home improvement project that ended in disaster. He has 2 pliers, a C-clamp, a tire gauge, and a windshield scraper as well, And 3 Cokes, 1 root beer, and a bottle opener that are all "grandma don't tells."

Today, he took off 2 winter gloves, entered the garage, and then yelled quite loud, as he saw Grandma cleaning with Windex and a towel, which was not allowed. Grandma claimed she was looking for 3 sets of missing keys when she saw his big mess, And to the charge of correcting a public health hazard, Grandma would willingly confess.
