Nanaimo Resident Impacted by Dementia?
Jim Wants to Hear From You.

Jim Mann, Alzheimer Advocate, Brings Dementia Town Hall to Vancouver Island

Nanaimo, B.C. – Jim Mann, a British Columbian and Alzheimer Society Board Member who was diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease in 2007, will hold a town hall on Apr. 23 at the Beban Park Recreation Centre (room 7) at 2300 Bowen Road in Nanaimo. The town hall, to begin at 10 a.m., is part of a province-wide push for a comprehensive, funded dementia action plan in B.C. Mann envisions a plan that will help avert a crisis and prepare B.C. for the rising tide of dementia.

In the lead-up to the B.C. election in May, Mann is touring the province to get a dementia action plan on the next government’s agenda. “In 2010, when the Alzheimer Society released its ground breaking report, Rising Tide, I said: ‘Alzheimer’s disease and other dementias are a tragic reality for a rapidly growing number of families. The time to act is now. We need a plan in B.C.’ It’s been over two years and I still don’t see such a plan,” says Mann.

The Alzheimer Society of B.C. and Mann seek action from the next B.C. government to develop and implement a comprehensive, funded dementia action plan that includes:

- Support for family caregivers, including financial incentives, expanded and improved home support programs, and access to appropriate care when and where it is needed for the person with dementia.
- Policies and programs that support early diagnosis and intervention to help reduce overall health-care costs and improve patient and family outcomes.
- Tools for health-care providers so they can give the best care possible, such as continuing on-the-job training.

- Access to the Alzheimer Society of B.C.'s First Link® program for all British Columbians who need it (the program is currently unavailable in most B.C. communities).
- Ongoing evaluation to track progress.

By 2038, there will be more than 177,000 people living with dementia in B.C. with family caregivers providing an estimated 118.7 million hours of unpaid care per year. Within 30 years, the associated economic burden of dementia in our province is projected to reach a cumulative total of $130.2 billion if we do not take a long view on the disease.

“Dementia could have a devastating impact on B.C.’s families unless we make a plan for action now,” says Larry Okotinsky, Interim CEO of the Alzheimer Society of B.C. “A comprehensive, funded dementia action plan is needed to ensure we are able to support people living with dementia in our province.”

About Dementia

Dementia is a term that describes a general group of brain disorders. Symptoms include the loss of memory, impaired judgment, and changes in behaviour and personality. Dementia is progressive, degenerative and eventually terminal. Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of dementia accounting for almost two-thirds of dementias in Canada today.

About the Alzheimer Society of B.C.

The Alzheimer Society of B.C. provides a province-wide network of support and education and information resources for families impacted by dementia. The Society is a non-profit organization that also advocates for better dementia health care and raises money to fund research. Learn more at www.alzheimerbc.org.
